

ABSTRACT OF THE INVENTION

A mitt comprising inner and outer layers of relatively soft material adapted to fit about a bristled brush to encapsulate a quantity of sudsy water, the material being perforated to permit relatively uniform dispersal of the sudsy water over the finish of an automobile to clean the same, while inhibiting damage to the finish by protecting the finish from the bristles of the brush.